BELGIUM

André Antoine was born on 3 February 1960 at Louvain. He has been a member of the CDH (Centre Démocrate Humaniste - Humanist Democratic Centre) since 1980 (at the time, the CDH was called the Christian Social Party).

Family and Academic Background

André Antoine was born into a farming family.

In 1983, he was awarded a degree in law by the UCL (Université Catholique de Louvain – Catholic University of Louvain). In addition, he was awarded a Certificate in European Studies.

Political Career

André Antoine began his working life in 1980.

He straightaway joined the party and became a Councillor to the Presidency. In 1985, he entered the Belgian parliament following the national elections of that year. He was re-elected in 1987, and would become chairman of his party's group within the Council of the French Community of Belgium. He held office during the 47th legislative session of the Chamber of Representatives of Belgium.

In 1988, he became a Commune Councillor at Ramillies, and would remain in office until 1992.

In 1991, Michel Lebrun, Minister of Education, appointed André Antoine to be his Head of Cabinet. In that same year, André Antoine would become Councillor for the Province of Brabant, a post that he would hold until 1994.

At the 1995 elections, he was elected a Member of the Walloon Parliament, and took over the chairmanship of his party's group within the Parliament of the French Community of Belgium.

He was re-elected a Member of the Walloon Parliament in 1999, and became group chairman in the Walloon Parliament.

In 1994, he was elected Commune Councillor for his commune of Perwez, of which he would become the Burgomaster in 2001 and 2004.

In 2003, Joëlle Milquet appointed him to the Deputy Chairmanship of the party.

In 2004, he became his party's leader within the Walloon government. He began his ministerial tenure as Deputy Premier and Minister for Housing, Transport, and Territorial Development.

In 2009, he became Deputy Premier, Minister of the Budget, of Finance, Employment, Training, and Sport, as well as Head of Airport Policy, within the governments of Wallonia and of the French Community.

After obtaining a secondary-teaching diploma, Isabelle Weykmans decided to study political science. Apart from a leaning towards journalism, she did not have any real career plan at the time, and had never considered politics with a capital 'P'. It was after joining the JFF – the young liberals' section of the PFF, or freedom and progress party – that she developed a taste for grass-roots political activity. In the JFF, there was discussion of politics, not only in Belgium's German-speaking community, but also in Belgium as a whole and elsewhere in the world.

In 2002, Ms Weykmans graduated from ULB in Brussels, and decided to do a master's in international relations and European studies at IEHEI in Nice and Berlin.

Upon completion of her studies, she began her career in the Senate, as advisor to Senator Berni Collas. Working alongside the senator, she learnt that politics is, first and foremost, about listening to people's needs, making them known and, where possible, initiating concrete actions and measures to address them.

Isabelle Weykmans stood in third place on the PFF European ticket in the election of 13 June 2004. The election outcome left the PFF in a strong position as it entered discussions with a view to the formation of a coalition for a majority in the German-speaking Community. The PFF got two ministerial posts, at least one of which had to be allocated to a woman.

Isabelle Weykmans returned to her hometown of Eupen and became the first female minister in the government of the German-speaking Community, and Belgium's youngest minister.

Her ministerial brief covers culture, media, heritage, youth, sport and adult training.

Dolores Cristina was appointed minister for education and culture on the 12th March 2008, following her election from the 9th and 10th districts. Her wide portfolio, in addition to education and culture, includes public broadcasting services, libraries, museums and national archives, arts, youth and sport.

Her previous ministerial appointment during the 10th legislature was as minister for the family and social solidarity (from March 2004 to March 2008), with a portfolio covering social security and social services, pensions, housing, equal opportunities, children, family, voluntary organisations, and welfare of irregular immigrants. From April 2003 to March 2004, she was appointed parliamentary secretary within the then ministry of social policy, focusing on housing and gender equality.

In April 1998, Mrs Cristina was elected mayor of Swieqi, a post of short duration as she was subsequently elected to parliament in the September general elections of that same year, in a casual election on the 10th district.

During the 9th Legislature (1998 – 2003), Mrs Cristina chaired the foreign affairs committee of the House of Representatives and was also a member of the joint parliamentary committee. From February 2002 to April 2003, she was alternate member at the convention on the future of Europe.

Mrs Cristina also held a number of political posts within the nationalist party. Between 1997 and 1998, she was president of the Women's Movement (MNP) and between 1998 and 2000 she was president of the administrative council.

Mrs Cristina has, over the years, been very active in the voluntary sector. Posts she held include that of president of the National Council of Women (1991-1995).

She has also held posts within the public sector and between 1992 and 1995 she was a board member of the public broadcasting services. From 1992 to 1994, she was a member on the commission for the international year of the family.

Mrs Cristina was also a member of the commission for the administration of justice (1996–1998); member of the commission on public financing of political parties (1996–1998); council member of the university of Malta (1994– 996); a member of the Inter-agency forum on violence against women (1993–1994).

Mrs Cristina graduated Bachelor of Arts (Hons.) from the Royal university of Malta in 1971. She has held teaching posts in history and English at secondary and post-secondary levels.

Dolores Cristina, the daughter of Michael Zammit and Antonia nee' Gauci, was born in Senglea on 10th January 1949. She is married to Victor and they have four children, Liliانا, Marilena, Alessandro and Anthony.

UNITED KINGDOM

Jeremy was born on 1 November 1966 and grew up in Surrey, where his parents still live. He went to Charterhouse school in Godalming, a town where two different generations of his family have lived for nearly 60 years.

After leaving school, Jeremy studied at Oxford University, where he graduated with a first class honours degree in Politics, Philosophy and Economics. He then went on to work for a management consultancy firm before going to Japan for two years where he taught English and learnt Japanese.

On his return to the UK, Jeremy set up his own educational publishing business, Hotcourses. The company, which employs over 200 people, has become the UK's largest publisher of guides and websites to help people find the right course or college (<http://www.hotcourses.com>). He also set up a charity to help AIDS orphans in Africa in which he continues to play an active role (www.hotcoursesfoundation.org).

Jeremy was re-elected as Member of Parliament for South West Surrey in May 2010, increasing the Conservative majority from 5711 to 16,318. On first becoming an MP in 2005 he increased the Conservative majority from 861 to 5711. He is well-known locally for his supermarket surgeries and has campaigned actively on local issues including overdevelopment and local NHS services. He was closely involved in the successful fights to prevent the closure of the Royal Surrey and Milford Hospitals.

In December 2005 he was appointed Shadow Minister for Disabled People, where he successfully campaigned for the BBC to increase the amount of subtitling on its programmes. He also campaigned strongly for simplification of the benefits system for disabled people and individual social care budgets. In July 2007 he was appointed to the Shadow Cabinet as Shadow Secretary of State for Culture Media and Sport where he has campaigned for more philanthropy for the arts, local TV, superfast broadband, a schools Olympics and a strengthened domestic tourism industry.

In May 2010 Jeremy was appointed Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport in the new Conservative - Liberal Democrat coalition.

Jeremy divides his time between Westminster and his constituency home in Farnham. He married his wife Lucia in July 2009 and they have one son

Mr Hunt was elected as MP for South West Surrey in May 2005. He was formerly Shadow Culture Secretary (2007-2010) and Shadow Minister for Disabled People (2005 - 2007). Before his election as an MP, Mr Hunt ran his own educational publishing business, Hotcourses.

He also set up a charity to help AIDS orphans in Africa in which he continues to play an active role.

Born on 1 November 1966, Mr Hunt was educated at Charterhouse school, Godalming and Oxford University. He lives in Farnham and London with his wife.
